THAT OF THE CHRISTIAN."—GLOBE.
Liebler & Co.'s Production of Hall Caine's some of the Humors of the Author of Many Cargoes" Transpired in the Play and Received Rare Unction by Mr. Goodwin's Art of Low Comedy.

The news that W. W. Jacobs of the "Many Cargoes" had turned his attention from the short tale of seafaring humor to the stage was one of the happiest items that game last year from London, and the success there of Cyril Maude in "Beauty and the Barge" promised well for Nat Goodwin's adventure with the piece here. But the revelation of the play last night at the Lyceum did not altogether fulfil expecta-

It was not without racy humors of the salt tides of the Thames, but somehow they had suffered a land change. In connection with this fact it may be stated that Mr. Jacobs had a chaperon in his stage debut in the person of Louis N. Parker, set down on the bill as collaborator.

Somebody has botched this Jacobs story. It would be a cruel heart that would lay the blame on Mr. Parker, who has already so many artistic sins to account for.

Being generous and kind, we prefer to call Mr. Jacobs to account, who has thus far been all to the good. Mr. Pinero once reproved literary men for their levity in approaching the theater. Arguing from the case of Stevenson and Henley, he asserted that they were prone to believe that the art of the theater was comprised in a stale bag of tricks.

The play last night was for the most part too violently at variance with nature and probability to qualify in the modest sphere of farce to which the program assigned it. It was certainly absurd-but not so much in a way to be funny as in a way to be pre-

To call the false and obvious methods To call the false and obvious methods employed Robertsonian is to post date them many generations—or rather to assign antecedents to what is too far fetched to be related to anything that was ever good. Jacobs emerged in a triumph of hearty laughter from the incubus of his stagecraft—or was it Mr. Parker's?

It is not that the piece was wholly without the salt of humor and of the sea. Sometimes it had the real smell of tidewater. But what greeted the nostrils for the most part was an ancient and fishlike smell. This is the greatest of pities; for the stage has sore need of genuine and racy observa-

This is the greatest of pities; for the stage has sore need of genuine and racy observations of character such as Mr. Jacobs is so abundantly able to supply. Before he can supply them, however, he must study not the antique humors of Noah and his Wyffe in the Mystery play (they were the first bargees), but the art of the stage as practised by his contemporaries. But suffice it to say that the play as a play was atrocious.

suffice it to say that the play as a play was atrocious.

The joyous fact remains that in the character of the 'Appy Bargee Mr. Goodwin's genius for low comedy all but rescued it from opprobrium. He was an ancient mariner of gray-white sidelocks and a stubble brush of beard, with many a heart enthralling tale of perils by sea, an Othello of fictitious adventure and a flirtatious Falstaff of the ready lie and the glib endearment. His sea legs were a creation that met Francis Wilson on his own ground without fear and without reproach.

All he did and said exuded a whiff as of the skipper's pipe, mingled with the odor of mud flats. There was a leer to his eye and a cock of his head that betokened a devil of a fellow with the wimmen. Four lydies had once arrived in pursuit of him, on his barge at Wapping—"My mistyke," as he truthfully admitted.

And so there was some laughter that was not altogether to be attributed tothe friendly enthusiasm of a first night. Whether the second and the third nights will prove as happy, and whether the play will weather the besetting frosts of the road, are matters of prophecy, not of theatrical reporting.

of prophecy, not of theatrical reporting.

False as the farce is to the life of happy bargedom, it may seem doubly outlandish in inland America or it may be accepted in good faith as a matter of conven-ional phantasy.

Miss Katherine Florence, as the Major's daughter, who fled to the barge from her affianced lover, only to be besieged in amorous encounter by the skipper, was hopelessly hampered by a preposterous and idiotic part.

The one performance except Mr.
Goodwin's which deserved special praise was the Mate of Mr. George Miller. This also had traces of Mr. Jacobs's homely laconic and boisterous comedy, and yielded moments of genuine delight. and idiotic part.

News of Plays and Players.

Louise Allen, who is Mrs. William Collier, will play the part of Miss Godesby, the smart society girl, which was created by Miss Clara Bloodgood, in the revival of "The Climbers" by the new Proctor all star company at the Fifth Avenue Theater on Sept.

18. Miss Amelia Bingham will be seen her original part. Daniel Frohman has engaged the following company for Augustus Thomas's new play, "The Embassy Ball," in which Lau-rance D'Orsay is to be the star: Mr. and Mrs.

rance D'Orsay is to be the star: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walcot, Maude Knowlton, Marian Barney, Mary Tunison, Stanley Dark, W. E. Hitchcock, Henry Heaton, E. W. Morrison, R. Carrington, Edgar MacGregor. The play will be produced out of town next month and come to New York later.

Richard Mansfield's company was further increased yesterday, by the addition of Fuller Mellish, Clarence Handysides, Sheridan Block, Franklyn Hurleigh and Winthrop Chamberlain. Mr. Mansfield's company now numbers 117 persons.

Andrew Mack Coming Home.

In a letter to a friend in this city Andrew Mack, the Irish comedian and singer, writes that he will return to this country from Australia the latter part of this month. Mack has been away for nearly a year and has had great success abroad. He is booked to open at San Francisco in "The Way to Kenmare" on Oct. 24. After a stay in that city he will return to New York and appear in a new play.

COTTON GROWERS IN SESSION.

Question of Fixing Minimum Price Referred to Committee for Action.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Sept. 6.-The opening session of the Southern Cotton Growers' Association was held this morning. The question of fixing the minimum price for the 1905 crop brought forth much discus-sion and was put into the hands of a com-Inittee of one delegate from each State.

A resolution was adopted that the president of the association meet with the Bankers' Association for the purpose of financing the present cotton crop.

The meeting is largely attended, four-teen States and Territories being repre-

CLOSES ALL FRENCH CABLE CO.'S OFFICES IN VENEZUELA.

Messages From Caracas Must Hereafter Be Sent Over the Government Telegraph Lines to La Guaira and From

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The State Department was to-day informed by Minister Russell, the American diplomatic representative to Venezuela, that the Venezuelan Government had closed the French Cable Company's offices at Caracas and at all other points in Venezuelan territory. Accordingly it has become necessary to send telegrams from Caracas to La Guaira over the Government cable line. At La Guaira they can be sent to another cable line for the transmission of a message between Caracas and La Guaira, a distance of but twelve miles. The Venezuelan Government has established a rate of 20 cents per word. Government officers here are inclined to think the rate exorbitant and per word. Government of the are are inclined to think the rate exorbitant and that the Government of Venezuela, having an exclusive line, is playing a hold-up game. As soon as the news that the French company's offices have been closed and the property seized reaches Paris it is thought here that France will make representations to Castro. The case of the French Cable Company is similar to that of the New York and Bermudez Asphalt Company. The Government maintained that the company was guilty of non-fulfilment of contract by failing to construct certain lines. The case was taken to the courts. It quickly passed through one and was appealed to another. Up it went to the highest court of the country, and at the end the concession of the company was canceled.

when the first decision annulling the

When the first decision annulling the concession was made France was considerably stirred up.

At that time the French Minister made forcible representations to President Castro, or rather to the Venezuelan Foreign Office, as Castro had withdrawn to the mountains and refused to receive any diplomats. French warships were sent to Caribbean waters to be close at hand. The two cruisers were placed at the disposal of the French Minister at Caracas and France was fully ready to take action against Venezuela.

French property has now been actually seized by the Venezuelan Government, and in view of the French belief that the and in view of the French belief that the company has been unjustly dealt with action is likely to be forthcoming soon. President Castro has been preparing for trouble. Recent reports from Venezuela indicate that he has made large purchases of arms and ammunition, coast defense and mountain guns. His pugnacious attitude has aroused but little apprehension here.

If the French Government desires to use force in making Venezuela return the property of the cable company it is not likely that the American Government will protest or interfere.
